

Regarding tolls at the CT border of I-84 in Western CT:

Please consider the negative consequences tolls at the borders will have on thousands of local people who live in Connecticut towns near or bordering New York State. Many of us have family and friends who live right over the state line and many of us work and conduct business in these towns. After all, for those living in Western CT, New York is just part of our neighborhood. Would the Legislators seriously think we local people should pay a toll just because we are traveling a few miles west on I-84 and crossing into New York State? That amounts to an inordinate tax burden on many of us. If necessary, I can and will avoid a toll as I know how to navigate all the rural back roads; but if everyone did that (and using modern GPS technology, everyone can), the back roads will soon become the new interstate.
